Leadership Out Manning Says

Premier Ernest C. Manning, speaking shortly after national Social Credit president Dr. R. N. Thompson forecast he would soon become National Leader, has flatly renounced any aspirations to this office. "I am not now a candidate. I have never been a candidate and I never will be a candidate," he stated categorically in Edmonton Sunday night.

Mr. Manning added that he was losing patience with party supporters who keep putting him up for election.

The renunciation came shortly after a national executive meeting of Social Credit top-slot men which was attended by Mr. Manning as well as by retiring leader Solon E. Low. The meeting was called to blueprint policy matters. Thompson said the five Western provinces and Quebec are solidly behind Mr. Manning, but added that three British Columbia hopefuls may enter the running. They are Premier W. A. C. Bennett, Attorney General Robert Bonner and former federal S.C. member George Hahn, an old time party stalwart.

Although the Manning statement came as a minor bombshell to the general public, who have in the main accepted the inevitability of national leadership, inside party sources said the move was forecast at a recent Calgary meeting at which former national president E. G. Hansell spoke.

At that meeting, Hansell, a close associate of Mr. Manning, suggested that it would be very unwise for Mr. Manning to accept a leadership job that would only put him on the Opposition side of the House of Commons with a minority following. He said he had seen too many good minds wither away in the Opposition benches to wish such a fate on Premier Manning.

As the Edmonton Sun pointed out last year, not the national leadership, which is a workhorse type of job, but the post of Prime Minister, is the position most Canadians expect him to fill.

Now that Mr. Manning has wiped his name from the slate, as possible national leader, it is anticipated that more prominence will be given to those aspirants who have remained in the background, awaiting such a clear statement of intention as that made by Mr. Manning on Sunday.

Organization of the Social Credit national executive calls for a National President as well as a National Leader. The Hansell-Low combination handled this dual chore in recent years until both resigned for health reasons. Neither job necessarily leads to the Prime Ministership, although the leader's job is the most likely.

In 1935, William Aberhart led Social Credit to victory in Alberta without running for a seat himself. He said he was content to see a Social Credit government elected. But he was drafted for the Premier's job, and later took a seat in Okotoks. It is believed a similar situation will prevail on the federal scene if Social Credit ever build a government force in Ottawa, with Premier Manning being drafted as P.M.

Motor vehicles are the top cause of accidental death up to the age of 65 years. After 65, it is falls.

THE Homemaker

By BERTHA M. McCUTCHEON

The woman who likes to make her own clothes is often frustrated because newly - developed fabrics are first introduced in ready-to-wear garments. Sometimes it takes months for them to become available by the yard.

B. McCutcheon

However, this year home sewers are being offered a wide choice of "Terylene" fabrics. The "Terylene" batiste which has scored such a success in wash-and-wear dresses, for instance, is now on yard goods counters in an array of prints and plain shades.

Sewing with a man-made fibre such as "Terylene" calls for a slight variation in the usual sewing technique. Here are a few pointers:

The thread and bindings used should be chosen so they will have the same wash-and-wear qualities as the fabric. Use "Terylene' thread and shrinkproof seam binding so there will be no danger of seams puckering in the wash.

Test the machine tension on a scrap of fabric. It may have to be loosened slightly. Make sure the needle is sharp—a jagged edge will snag the exceedingly strong fibres in the fabric.

As in any dressmaking project, each seam should be pressed as it is stitched, before the garment is put together, and make sure that darts and seams are in the right position before pressing. Sharp creases are sometimes difficult to remove once they have been pressed into a synthetic.

Allow a generous seam allowance since fraying of raw edges may be a problem. In a firmly-woven cloth, pinking will be adequate prevention but many fabrics made of man-made fibres will need to have raw edges overcast or turned under and machine-stitched.

"Terylene" will keep its freshness for so many seasons that it's well worth a little extra care in making-up. The home dressmaker can be sure the fabric won't shrink or lose its crispness in the wash and she'll take pleasure from her creation every time she wears it.

Mink Ranch Raided And Animals Clubbed By Quartette Of Boys

LAC LA BICHE — Four local boys, none over 12 years of age, confessed when apprehended by the town police on Thursday of last week to loosing a large number of mink from a local mink ranch.

Mike Ferrie reported to police Monday night that some 60 of his choice mink had been turned loose from their pens and clubbed, many of them were found dead. As a result of the damage done by the boys Mr. Ferris estimated the loss at over $2,000. Many of the mink were found in a sick state and others are running at large. It is reported the boys confessed to beating the animals with clubs as they were let loose from their pens.

Mr. Ferris, who keeps some 1,400 mink, states that the mink he was keeping for breeding stock are now mingled with the young ones he intended to pelt in the fall, which creates a problem that only a fur farmer with a large number of mink can realize.

Constables Calvert and Rizzoli started investigations as soon as the incident was reported to them on Monday night. Again on Wednesday more mink were loosed, but the constant vigilance of the team of constables led to apprehension of the culprits on Thursday morning. Apparently the only motive for the crime was to satisfy a desire for thrills.

The boys are now in the hands of authorities.

Blueberry Time

By Gladys Diesel

One has only to count the many cars crossing the bridge on week-ends, or peek into the full pails being carried by the natives along the road, to know that blueberry harvest is here. However, scarcely anyone is content to sit on the side line and watch.

We, too, must pack a picnic lunch, grab our pails and go to our own choice spot in blueberry land to pick the luscious fruit for ourselves, rejoicing that the God of plenty has smiled upon us once again.

Gospel Bulletin

By REV. C. G. NESS

Upon our return from the United States we were happy to have with us in the Boyle vicinity Evangelist Sammy Ford of Everett, Wash. We count it a privilege to have had him at Bethel assembley at Boyle, Grassland and Lac la Biche. The crowds were very good.

We also had the joy of being in Fort St. John, B.C., for a week of meetings. Here we were helped by a co-worker, Miss J. Boychuk, a young lady who has left her teaching profession for the ministry.

Since then we have held a meeting at Belbute and at Winton, Sask. Both the pastors report the blessing of the Lord upon their work this summer.

From there we travelled to Swan River where Bro. Harberanko has a good work. We also had a meeting with Pastor Dawm at Lenswood, Man. They are just completing a new church building and will dedicate it the first Sunday in September.

At present we are north of Winnipeg where we held meetings in Poplar Field and now at Flisher Branch. There are many who do not understand the English language and must have their mother tongue brought to them.

Write us when you can as we count on your prayers and your standing by us at this time. Our mailing address in Box 129, Boyle.

The bride was gowned in a beautiful floor-length model of net over satin featuring a lace bodice. Her veil was held in place by a tiny crown of seed pearls and sequins. She carried a large bouquet of red roses.

The four bridesmaids, in identical dresses, shoes, gloves and headpieces, were: Miss Nadia Kowalyk, sister of the groom; Miss Angeline Broda, sister of the bride; Miss Sylvia Trefin, cousin of the bride, and Miss Rose Sallie. Their bouquets of star flowers were in assorted colors.

Best men were: Mr. Steve Kuzik and Mr. Don Kuzik, cousins of the groom; Mr. Mike Mamchur and Mr. Rae Kolach.

Following the ceremony pictures were taken, after which the wedding party drove to the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Kowalyk, Frains, where the wedding reception and dance were held. Approximately 300 persons gathered to celebrate the occasion. The Northern Bright Stars of Lac la Biche supplied the Ukrainian music.

Minburn-Vermilion Health Unit Helps Prepare Child For School

Your child is facing an exciting adventure—his first days at school. He has heard a lot about this strange new world and he's looking forward to it with eagerness, curiosity and a mixture of many other emotions. To leave the cosy protection of his home for the uncertainties of a new kind of life is a tremendously big event. For some time now, he has perhaps been feeling left out of things as he watched other children going off happily to that mysterious somewhere whereone learns to read and write like grownups. He very likely has listened, wide-eyed to tales of what you can or can't do in this place called school. Yet, above any shivers of doubt or anxiety concerning the unknown, he has probably become quite sure in his own mind that it is a good place because, after all, other children, his friends, go there. It's natural for your child to want to do what his playmates do just as he wants to like and be liked by them.

But will your child be ready for this adventurous journey into a new life? Naturally the better he is equipped, the more successfully will he fare. There are certain things he needs in order to face his new experiences with confidence and a good chance of getting along throughout his school career.

Your child should start his school life in good, sound health. Have your family physician or the local health clinic give him a complete physical examination. An eye examination is very important. His teeth should be checked, too by a dentist. If these examinations show that there are ailments or defects that can and should be looked after, then follow the doctor's and dentist's advice and have them corrected, if possible, before you enrol him at school.

It's likely that your child has already been immunized against certain of the childhood diseases such as diphtheria, whooping cough and smallpox. If not, have it done immediately either by your doctor or at the nearest public health clinic. If all immunizations have been done previously, make sure your child gets the necessary booster dose.

Insist on him getting regular and sufficient hours of sleep to help him enjoy school. He needs from 10 to 12 hours of sleep in a quiet, darkened room with an open window, to build up his energy and offset tiredness.

Good appearance will go a long way in helping your child get along well with his schoolmates. He should know how to wash his face and hands, comb his hair, carry and use a handkerchief or tissue, not only for blowing his nose but to cover a cough or sneeze. His clothing should be simple and practical and at the same time attractive. When a child has learned to do things for himself he gains poise and respect. He will be better able to look after his outer garments by himself at school if his clothes are roomy and all fastenings are simple.

If he is used to sharing duties at home he'll have confidence in doing things at school. He should be able to keep his own toys and belongings in order and help with simple household tasks.

Your child's ability to talk so that he can be understood is obviously a basic necessity. It's most unfair to him to send him along to school handicapped in this way. He learns speech habits in his home so let him hear good English; encourage him to say what he means in sentences, not merely in single words or phrases which are understood in the family. It is well to set an example of soft, pleasant voices avoiding harsh loud tones. Teach him correct terms and names of things. He should be able to say clearly his whole name, address and telephone number. Learning to give and take, to get along wih others, is necessary for your child's happiness at school—in fact, throughout his entire life. Encourage his friendliness towards other people. Give him the place and the oppotunity to play with other children.

HOW'S HIS MENTAL OUTLOOK

Your child should be well equipped with sound mental and emotional health. He'll have this in good measure if he has felt secure in your affection, learned to take his place in the family group, shared in small responsibilities, learned to do some things on his own, and has had a chance for play with playmates his own age.

If he has a healthy attitude towards authority he'll fit more easily into the school life with its many regulations. If he hasn't as yet learned obedience and the necessity to co-operate in routine, you'll not be helping him by being overly protective and "taking his side" against the school. If you sincerely think there is something wrong with the school rules, then talk them over frankly and openly with the proper school authorities.

When your child starts school, he hesitates, naturally, about leaving the familiarity of home. Yet, at the same time, he wants to push aside babyish habits of being dependent on you. He wants to be on his own, like his fellow pupils. The exciting time he has had in feeling self - important and independent may, for a time, make him guard his new experiences as quite secret; something very private and your questioning and curiosity and try to keep his new life apart from you. This is a phase that soon passes in a happy blending of precious to him. He may resent school and home influences. Before long, if not immediately, your child will want to share with you his school experiences and achievements. He proudly brings his work home, tells you about his songs and games. Meet his pride with yours—praise his efforts with the same enthusiasm he shows for them and go easy on criticisms. He'll move farther and faster with praise than with criticism.

BE A PARTNER IN HIS SCHOOLING

Your child is a very special person whom you've watched and tried to understand and help from his earliest infancy. For this reason you have valuable suggestions that you can share with his teacher. If you work closely together (rather than apart, or even against!) then the home and the school can assure your child the attention and consideration he needs. With more opportunities to meet new experiences and to accept responsibility, he'll have a better chance of becoming a happy, useful grown-up.

Even though the school will now occupy the greater part of his day, you still have the leading role to play in helping to develop your child's character. His future will depend, more than anything else on your maintaining that warm loving relationship which began in his babyhood and which should continue throughout the growing years. Supporting and encouraging him in all his outside activities will provide him with that feeling of security so essential to his success in school.

Funeral Home Established At Thorhild By Johnson

Thorhild now has a funeral home. The newest addition to the line of businesses in Thorhild is a funeral home, which was officially opened this week.

Thorhild Funeral Home offers complete funeral service. Bringing bodies from Edmonton or other districts will be made at no extra charge. The establishment will carry a line of caskets, grave stones and flowers.

TIPS FOR PARENTS

By HELEN R. HEWSON
Parent Education Associates

"HE is an excellent example of train and trust." Uncle Jim stood on the steps of the cottage and watched his nine-year-old nephew row smoothly into the cove, tie the skiff to its moorings, and jump ashore.

He had spent most of the morning fishing off the far shore of the bay and as he came up the path he held his catch of five nice bass. "I'll clean them Mum, and we'll have them for lunch."

Uncle Jim went back to his porch chair and turned to his brother. "Bob, Ellen and I have tried many times to tell you how much our annual visit with you and your family means to us.

"Having no children of our own we do enjoy our week with you and Mary and your three boys. We don't know very much about the business of bringing up children but the results in this family look mighty good to us.

"Those words 'train and trust' slipped out just now but if I had thought long and hard I don't believe I could have expressed it any better.

"You've taught the boys how to handle themselves in a situation and then left them free to do it.

"I know you have set limits but they seem reasonable and sensible to me. The boys must think so too, because they rarely overstep the mark.

"Jimmy knows he can't take the boat out of this bay when he is alone and I have never heard him coax or complain about it.

"When John took us down the lake yesterday he handled the boat like a veteran. We traveled at a good clip but there were no stunts or showing off.

"And young Bob's brand new driving license doesn't seem to have created any serious problems.

HORSE PLAY TOO

At that moment all three boys dashed from the boat house and with a whoop and a yell, dived into the water. They scrambled to the dock where they scuffled and wrestled in good-natured horseplay.

Their mother smiled, "You see, they do have their foolish moments, but on the whole they are dependable boys.

"They have good judgment for boys of their age, probably because we do trust them and they are free to test themselves in many situations, to learn their own strengths and weakness.

Rake Helps In Harvesting Of Blueberry Crop

Blueberry harvesting by the rake method is seven times faster than hand picking, notes A. F. Rayment of the St. John's, Newfoundland, experimental farm.

The blueberries require cleaning with a winnowing machine when the rake is used, he says, but this can be done in the evening or delayed until a rainy day.

During the optimum period for packing, while the berries are still firm, fruit can be held five days without raising the percentage of crushed fruit to the maximum allowable for Grade A. However, the holding period drops to one or two days near the end of the season.

Rake harvesting has no harmful effect in yields the following year, and the fruit keeps equally as well as when picked by hand.

Little Drinking Found In Russia

HAMILTON, Ont. — Restrained drinking habits of Premier Kruschev—at least in public—could be an attempt aimed at encouraging his fellow Russians to consume less hard liquor.

This was the opinion given here by Dr. John Linton, secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation, who has just returned from a visit to the Soviet Union.

Speaking at the Ontario Institute of Alcohol Studies at McMaster University, Dr. Linton declared: "There has been a big change in the social drinking pattern in the Soviet Union."

He believed this had been brought about through a "concerted effort by those in power."

The 57-year-old Toronto lecturer said Kruschev could be giving a personal example just as Mendes France did when, as premier of France, he spoke against excessive drinking.

"I saw very little drunkenness in the Soviet Union," declared Dr. Linton.

Fact Finders For Alberta Agriculture

With the government of Canada's involvement in modern farm business, they must be kept up-to-date on all aspects of that business. Among their fact-finders are the staffs of the Division of Agricultural Economics who keep in close touch with farm progress and people by continuous surveys in the field.

To avoid duplication, surveys on the wheat farms of the prairies are confined almost entirely to Saskatchewan. The Alberta staff is more concerned with irrigation practices of the south and with mixed farming operations of the Red Deer, Vegreville, Barrhead and Rocky Mountain House areas.

Around Rocky Mountain House a unique situation is reported by Gordon Haase, head of the economics division for Alberta. Intended as a study of the fringe areas, the Rocky Mountain House settlement proved by no means typical. In this region around 40 per cent of the farmers' income was found to be from non-farm sources. Lumbering, oil wells, bridge building and road construction provide an important source of revenue there.

The area does, however, provide an example of the type of work done by the economics division in the course of survey. The study area contained two blocks of farm land, one north and the other south of Rocky Mountain House, containing 876 quarter sections in all. A few miles to the west, land areas have been withdrawn from settlement. Just west of that is the forest conservation district that is part of the Eastern Rockies watershed.

In this survey area, 290 farmers were interviewed and records obtained of the amount of land farmed, the number of people residing on the farms, number of acres cropped and uncropped, the changing position of agricultypes of share agreement on land and livestock, and other matters of interest.

Useful as such information is, it time to time that are important. The general purpose of these studies is a continuing survey of ture in various districts and its relation to the federal government's programs. To provide worthwhile assistance for agriculture, its complexities must be appreciated and up-to-date appraisals must be available. The aim of the economics division is to provide this information.

A small herring boat commanded by the Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen was the first ship to sail through the long-sought Northwest Passage. The ship spent three winters locked in Arctic ice before completing the journey in August, 1906.
